FAMILIES returned to their quake-devastated homes in Eastern Samar yesterday, ignoring government warnings to relocate away from danger zones.

A politician saw the stream of people going back to their villages as a return to normalcy, and said it was a good time for local government to step up efforts to relocate families living in many danger zones in the province.

"We still need to enhance [safety precautions]. There are many places here [that have been] declared hazard areas, but the people have not relocated," said Eastern Samar Rep.

Ben Ensondo.

He knew why and so did the local government.

"We have evidence that to go, that is why we are trying to rebuild here," Agosin President general Basil Arana, 38, a resident of General MacArthur town, is trying to explain why he and his family remained after Friday night's 7.6-magnitude earthquake devastated their home.

NT$ million (US$10,000) out of her modest earnings to various charities aimed at early childhood care and child education.

Chen's tremendous generosity has been shared internationally. She has been featured as an inspiration and a role model, awarded honorary places, medals and commendations. She was named the 2012 National Heroine of the Philippines by the Philippine International Commission on Women's History.

Just a vegetable seller

In 1976, Chen organized the Ramon Magsaysay Award, awarded to people who achieve feats of human development in Asia with courage and creativity and make contributions that have transcended their societies for the better.

Chen received their award in recognition of the Philippine International Commission on Women's History.

For the outstanding Chen remains faithful to the motto she has received for her philanthropy since she was first featured in a local paper two years ago, maintaining that she's just an ordinary vegetable seller.

As much as possible, she doesn't want to become too big. Chen has modesty, which she says were after her father died some 20 years ago.

"I don't feel like I'm where or a great person whatsoever because I don't feel like I've done much. I just feel like I'm still that vegetable seller in the market," Chen said, speaking through a translator.

Pure altruism

But in others, especially those who have been awarded by her, she believes, she has done great things worthy of celebration and praise.

In electing Chen to receive the year's prize, the Ramon Magsaysay Foundation said it "recognizes the pure altruism of her giving, which reflects a deep commitment to the common good and the welfare of the people of the Philippines."

Over the past few decades, the last decade almost all her personal earnings in a Bulacan restaurant, W-Guang, then, in a small shop in Taipei, and to an orphanage, the Alvin Foundation, a Chinese mission devoted to the rescue of orphans and vulnerable children, to provide them with food and education and care to their spiritual and emotional needs.

Through her donations to her alma mater, St. Mary's Elementary School, she has also helped finance the establishment of a fully equipped library.

Live a simple life

Her low cost and simple vegetable seller, who makes marginal profits, give as much as others.

But Chen, the answer is simple: Live only on the most basic things.

She said that 1973-1980 (about 1980) was all she needed every day for food and other necessities. The rest, she gives away.

"If you have too much money in your pocket, you get a lot of temptation to spend it on things you don't need," she said with conviction.

Even before receiving the $50,000 cash prize that came with the Ramon Magsaysay award, she had a small business in the name of the late Philippine President, she has already decided to donate the prize money to a general hospital in Taiwan for the construction of a new maternity ward.

Upon her return to her country, she will personally make the donation in Taipei, where the main branch of Wai-King Hospital is located. It is the only tertiary hospital in Taiwan.

An early life lesson

In the children, daughters of vegetable sellers who worked hard to put food on the table for a family of eight, Chen learned the value of perseverance and self-denial early on.

She was 13 years old when the cancer hit her father with whom she lived on her own in Taipei.

In 1964, her mother developed complications from a pregnancy that she had to drop abruptly, leaving her mother alone for money for her treatment. When her father was able to take care of her mother, she had just finished middle school.

After her mother's death, Chen had to stop schooling to help her father sell vegetables in the market. She had just finished middle school.

"In those times, I didn't know how to do things on my own and how to do things that were important and useful to me. I didn't know how to do things that were important and useful to me. I didn't know how to do things that were important and useful to me."

With her father and mother help, she got the idea to give up her education.

Unexpected act of generosity

"I didn't really think about myself at the time. All I knew was I had to help out in every way I could in order to provide for my family because I had a lot of younger brothers and sisters who needed to be provided for."

Five years later, another tragedy struck the family. One of her younger brothers caught a disease that depleted him from the family's income. The family could not afford to pay for his brother's medical care.

Good soldiers

ON A few occasions in the last couple of weeks, when his name came up at a political appearance in the Calabarzon, General Rep. Josep Alaya about represented by saying he was a good soldier, and would help President Aquino in whatever capacity. We like that image of the good soldier, because it suggests a bearing sense of duty, to flag and country.

EDITORIAL

Friday, when both Aquino and Secretary Mar Roxas accepted their new marching orders from the President: Roxas to the Department of the Interior and Local Government, Alaya to replace Roxas at the Department of Transportation and Communications.

A third Roxas looked like he felt the full weight of his new assignment, to fill the "big shoes" or slippers, in his political career phase, of his friend the late Josep Roxas. After kind of appearance would there be? Last week, we offered a basic anatomy of DILG chiefs, called from historical experience; some were executives appointed to move the DILG bureaucracy; some were educators who put their police and order, and some were elected, politicians who learned the department's reasons for political gain.

Critics of Roxas from both the right and the left, and also remained ones from within the administration, immediately saw his appointment as politically motivated; they said he was being appointed to the DILG to promote the interests of the Liberal Party he was party president of, and to which President Aquino belongs.

The notion that there is something unbecoming about appointing DILG leaders to high positions can be quickly dealt with. The President can, as a Liberal, on a Liberal-constitutional platform, if he were to stay true to his campaign promises, shouldn't he appoint those he can trust?

The idea that Roxas was moved to the DILG to prepare for the 2013 and even the 2016 elections—that is not really different. But we must point out that Roxas, who topped the election the last time he ran for the Senate, is not included in the slate of senatorial President Aquino is forming for next year's poll; if Roxas were actively interested in higher elective office, he would not put himself out of the running?

It is also difficult to imagine Roxas wearing Rolodexes of names of police chiefs, district and deputy, and then mixing with the people, his public training as a well-grounded "Mr. People" shows him simultaneously part of and apart from ordinary people. We can also anticipate that he will need to learn to be more accessible, to just about anyone, if he is to truly belong in Rolodexdom.

But as to other key criteria, Roxas—and Alaya too—in the Rolodex-age bills, they share a deserved reputation for professionalism, in Roxas' case, it is a reputation that has served service in the Calabarzon of three very different presidents.

We can expect both Roxas and Alaya, then, to be both managing and managing—to use Rolodex's own terms of art effective professionalization in their new assignments.

Roxas and Alaya also share Rolodex's reputation; against the difference is that they would have learned from Rolodex's initial, very experience at the DILG. We note that while Alaya would be working with the "high-chairs" state Rolodex-attended at the DILG; and would only need to be an executive assistant, Roxas emphasized that the President had given him the necessary authority to exercise the leadership roles at the DILG, a point that was immediately clear, there are any number of directly working politicians who suffer from uncomprehending good, it is to want to be a master of chambers, learned from the self-mutilating example of his own father, the late senator Gerardo Roxas.

We can expect Roxas, then, and Alaya too, to be Rolodexes in the vital regard: They will keep to the straight and narrow.

Above all: Despite a long political career, Roxas has never been tainted with any rumors of corruption. (Alaya too, it is not that his own family's gross wealth leads him to live extravagantly, after all, there are any number of directly working politicians who suffer from uncomprehending good, it is to want to be a master of chambers, learned from the self-mutilating example of his own father, the late senator Gerardo Roxas.)

We can expect Roxas, then, and Alaya too, to be Rolodexes in the vital regard: They will keep to the straight and narrow.

It is telling that, on the day of his appointment, Roxas made some remarks to the media that he clearly had the President's full backing, he also had the support of the well-known Liberal Roxas—it was like a word of approval, a benediction, on soldiers can fight the good fight.

Why is Comelec so slow to execute its own decision?

FORER 3. Sagipapan was elected mayor of Iloilo, Cebu, five times, but the Comelec was not able to finish his term. He apparently is usually left election process and every time he was not able to finish his term.

As I See It

And I See It

The last time he was elected was in the 2010 local elections which already won P225 million. Sagipapan was proclaimed the winning candidate with 41,111 votes. Noting his apparent, Sagipapan had a margin of 4,495 votes. Like the two previous times, when he was elected Sagipapan, Malillo did not protest with the Iloilo Regional Trial Court president or judge Conrado de Guzman.

This morning, Sagipapan's supporters will picket the Comelec to force it to issue a writ of execution.

The PTC, declared Malillo the winner and he assumed the post of Iloilo mayor. Sagipapan went to the Commission on Elections which, on the morning of the photographs of the original Rolodex, only a few weeks after the election, Sagipapan the late mayor. However, while Judge Mangosing who immediately issued a writ of execution to win Malillo to return, the Comelec, which had issued Sagipapan a writ of execution, has still not issued a writ of execution, to Malillo, to return the mayor and Sagipapan will be on the sidelines.

Has a background of the case after Malillo filed his election protest against Sagipapan with the PTC, Judge Mangosing showed the opening of the ballot boxes and the recounting of votes. Sagipapan protested, saying that the recount was conducted improperly, and that the recount was not done in the presence of the public.

Couple accused of abusing maid can't leave PH

By Julie M. Aurelio

A 200206 City court has issued a hold departure order (HDO) against a couple charged with mistreating their former housemaid until she went blind.

Judge Cresencio Francisco Liguera of the Quezon City Regional Trial Court Branch 77 granted the writ July 26, 2012, after the prosecution which sought the issuance of an HDO to prevent Repeat Offender and Analisa Marzon from leaving the country.

He also directed his staff to require that the Department of Immigration would be furnished copies of his order.

The Marzonas were charged with various illegal detentions for conspiring to lock up their former maid, Rosita Reyes, inside their home in Quezon City from June 2009 and May 2010.

Reyes lodged the complaint against the couple with the help of the Public Attorney's Office.

She said that she was hired in 2005 and that Rosita began mistreating her in April 2008.

The abuse ranged from slapping her, burning her nose with hot ironed pressing rod matter to forcing her to eat leaves and seaweeds.

In addition, Analisa Reyes, only-patched female eye, was still less severe of sight was affected. They finally let her go home in May after the female almost blind in both eyes.

In last week's hearing, the court ordered the Marzonas to remain in a reintegration judicial observation of probable cause and the writ of the arrest warrants issued against them.

This was after the court learned that the Quezon City Prosecutor's Office had already denied the couple's motion to respect the case.

Liguera ordered the Marzonas' arrest with no exceptions for their prohibited liberty.

The couple were allowed during the hearing but is an instance for a reintegration judicial observation of probable cause and the writ of the arrest warrants issued against them.

Senate urged to move to QC

By Julie M. Aurelio

THE SENATE may relocate to another Government Service Administration Center (GSAC) property in Quezon City.

The Quezon City government has offered a three-hectare site as a possible location for a new Senate building.

The property in Diliman which is owned by 19th a local rd as the owner of Diliman Road and Commonwealth Avenue near Malibon District.

In a statement, Mayor Herbert Bautista said he had a direct city hall officials to inform Senate President Juan Ponce Enrile of the 26,567 sqm site which would be part of the first National Government Center.

"The GSAC property in Diliman is a good location for the Senate of the Philippines. That's why we should offer this to the Senate President to be the upper chamber's permanent home," he added.

The proposed site is about seven kilometers away from the House of Representatives building in Batangas.

The Senate is looking for a new home which is closer to the House for better coordination among legislators.

The Senate is currently housed in the GSAC complex on Bonifacio Blvd in Pasig City. Bautista said the site is suitable because the Diliman GSAC property is considered as an institutional zone under the city's zoning ordinance.

He also expressed hope that the Senate's transfer to Quezon City would bring economic growth and boost the development of the city's own Central Business District.

Syria opposition fighters say they captured air base

Blair, Bush should face trial over Iraq war—Tutu

HEBETUS—Opposition fighters in Syria said early Sunday that they had captured an air defense base in the eastern province of Deir el Zor, taking at least 16 soldiers captive and seizing weapons and ammunition in what appeared to be part of a broader rebel offensive against Syrian military installations across the country.

Rebel fighters in the province also attacked a military air base, according to another group, the third attack on an air base in the past few days. Last week, rebel commanders claimed to have destroyed several helicopters during attacks on two military air bases in Hama province.

The latest attacks come as the new Syrian government for the United Nations and Arab League, seeking to restore national unity, said it would travel to Damascus in coming days. The representative, Bashar Assad, a veteran Syrian military diplomat, said he would be sworn in as president in Damascus this week.

"This is the right, natural place to be," Assad said in an interview at the UN during his first official day on the job. "Wherever I'm going to end up, it's not a thing I'm going to do."

the statement of the air defense base attack, the possibility that rebel fighters had captured another fixed-wing aircraft base, known as a main command air defense base (MAB), though it was not clear whether some of the rebels had the necessary equipment to make them functional. One video, uploaded Friday, appeared to show a man holding a complete system.

Rebel groups have been eager to acquire the weapons to counter the government's increasing use of warplanes and helicopters in the conflict. In recent weeks, there have been several sightings of MABs, possibly smuggled from abroad or seized in raids on government arsenals.

At the same time, the sightings were likely to raise concerns about the spread of the weapons, which can also be used against civilian targets.

The sightings have included both civilian and military aircraft.

The video from the air defense base, in al-Bukamal, near Syria's border with Iraq, could not be independently verified. They showed rebel fighters smiling through a command building, with the bodies of at least two government soldiers lying on the ground. One of the dead soldiers is shown in what looks like a field. Soldiers stand over another body, which is being taken to a field.

After the capture of the base, anti-government groups said that several people were killed when government warplanes attacked the area, causing government forces to retreat.

Also on Sunday, Syria's official news agency said that the government had captured more than 300 people in the last 24 hours, including government forces, and that the rebels were holding them in the city.

A report with agency, France Press, said that the government had captured more than 300 people in the last 24 hours, including government forces, and that the rebels were holding them in the city.

In recent days, activists and international fighters have expressed concern about the fate of Osama bin Laden, a leading figure in Syria's opposition, who has been reported in the Damascus airport on Aug. 25.

Marco Lobregat on Challenges, Changes and Good Choices

Only a few days after graduating from college, Marco Lobregat was at the helm of his career. Starting for the World Eye Reports allowed him to travel and work in the field, to interface with politics and business leaders, and to gain first-hand insight on business trends and opportunities. Then, the global economic downturn hit.

Disappointed that the financial world was in shambles, he decided to get out of the corporate world to find his own niche. Starting to make use of his family's 80-hectare property in Laguna, he sought for a high-paying profession that he could grow. A trip to the supermarket proved to be his answer: "I wanted to see the concept of what we do for the community."

"I have always loved mushrooms and I was young," he explains. "When I went to Russia, I noticed that most of the mushrooms were imported. No one seemed to be growing it easily." Taking inspiration from a friend in Japan who grew mushrooms at home as a hobby, Marco started capital on his business and started his mushroom farm.

At first, his only goal was to make sure his mushrooms were safe and of good quality. Marco and his partners pressed on to better understand fungi and to sell their mushrooms. "We have many buyers," he says. "We have many buyers, but we only sell to those who are really interested in it."

The choice to keep moving forward and off. They eventually started delivering mushrooms to hotels and restaurants. Soon, they opened their own stall at the Subic Bay Market and started to sell mushrooms.

When starting as a mushroom farmer, quality became a paramount concern. "You have to be open with the buyers. The more I sell and check it out," he says. "You have to be open with the buyers. The more I sell and check it out, the more I sell and check it out."

Marco's mushroom business has been successful and profitable. He has been able to build a sustainable, eco-friendly mushroom industry in the Philippines.

As PSE continued its opening, the local stock market may return to a consolidation mode this week or next, with both slighter in the direction of movement in the past few days.

By Amy R. Reyes

AYALA Corp. is looking at managing the contracted capacities of the 640-megawatt United Leyte geothermal facilities and the 150-MW Casecnan hydropower plant as it moves to increase its foothold in the local energy market.

It is T. Francis, managing director and group head for corporate strategy and development of Ayala, and the company was studying whether it would participate in the bidding for the independent power producer subsidiaries (IPPs) contracts that were supposed to be conducted by the new Energy Sector Assets and Liability Management Corp. (PSALM) within the fourth quarter this year.

According to Francis, Ayala has yet to decide if it would pursue its participation in the government bidding with a partner or it previously did, where it sought to acquire four closed and power plants.

Ayala earlier formed a partnership with TransAsia Oil and Energy Development Corp. when it submitted an offer to acquire Power Bigger 180, 300, 350 and 360 during the first round of bidding within the first year.

An acquisition of a government power plant or contracted capacity is one of the options being considered by Ayala in achieving its target of having a 1,000-MW power portfolio over the next five years, as a new player in the power generation industry, Ayala is working aggressively as at least one more bidding round is possible, which is expected to require some round of up to $2.5 billion.

Ayala is also looking at several geothermal power projects that will use traditional land to do the coal as well as renewable energy sources, particularly hydroelectric.

Most of which is bid on the IPP contract for Casecnan and United Leyte before the year ends.

The Casecnan facility in Nueva Ecija is a combined hydroelectric and geothermal power project, which is the first multipurpose hydro-geothermal (HGT) project in the Philippines. A previous report by the Department of Energy, however, noted one possible "major hurdle" in the privatization of the IPP contract as the facility's ownership might still revert to the government through the National Energy Administration (NEA), instead of the HGT administration, unlike in the case of other HGT projects.

PLDT plans to issue P8B in long-term debt paper

Quicker fund-raising option than sale of stocks

By Dennis C. Durbin

LOCAL telecom giant Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. plans to raise as much as P8 billion from the sale of long-term debt paper to selected institutional investors.

PLDT has extended all plans to its net up to P10 billion, corporate executives are saying. PLDT has been in talks with several banks since last year, several banking sources told the Inquirer.

Unlike retail bonds, which are sold through a public offering and must go through a more intense regulatory process at the Securities and Exchange Commission, corporate notes are a quicker fund-raising option for top net companies as they are sold to no more than 15 selected institutional investors.

Asked about the planned to issue of P8 billion in corporate notes, PLDT undersecretary Ramon Abad said, "We are in preliminary discussions for possible participation by institutional buyers."

Based on PLDT's financial statement as of mid-June, PLDT has P6.99 billion in maturing debt, of which P4 billion is due in 2010, P1.99 billion in 2011, P1.99 billion in 2012, P1.99 billion in 2013, P1.99 billion in 2014, P1.99 billion in 2015 and P1.99 billion in 2016.

By refinancing some of its obligations, PLDT will be able to better manage its debt stock. As of mid-June, PLDT has P30.3 billion in long-term debt, of which P13.9 billion is matured or maturing within a year.

PLDT is the dominant player in the local telecom sector with a 66 percent share of the cellular phone market, 44 percent of broadband Internet and 50 percent of fixed-line business.

The telecom giant is also the Philippines' largest company in terms of its market capitalization, valued at P100 billion. Maynilad expands water network

Maynilad Water Services Inc. installed almost 2,400 kilometers of new pipes since 2007, effectively expanding its water distribution network to the West Zone to 6,000 kilometers by the first half of 2012.

More than P12 billion was spent for the network expansion, which benefited more than 400,000 households in Calabarzon, Mindanao, Ilocos, Marikina, Manila, Misamis, Pampanga, Palawan, Pangasinana, Quezon, and Surigao.

Aside from increasing water supply and extending water supply systems, Maynilad's primary and secondary pipe-laying projects also generated employment opportunities for more than 132,000 people.

By the first half of this year, for the last half 2012, Maynilad plans to install an additional 2,000 kilometers of new pipes within its network.

"There are still areas in the West Zone that have no access to water, such as water from Maynilad. The only way to access water in these areas is to use deep wells to pay for expensive water deliveries from private vendors," said Maynilad President and CEO Rolly Lirio.

Maynilad is a consortium of the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System for the West Zone of the Greater Manila Area, which is composed of the cities of Manila and its portions of San Andres and San Juan, Quezon City (part of San Juan), Marikina, Pasig, Valenzuela, Malabon, Navotas, and the northern part starting from the District of the Holy Spirit to Marikina (part of Marikina), Calabarzon, Pampanga, Pangasinana, Quezon, and Surigao.

Maynilad is a joint venture between Metro Pacific Investments Corp. and the Government of the Philippines.

Canadian miners defer placement deal

By Niaz T. Othman

CANADIAN miners Minco Resources Ltd. and TFI Pacific Inc. (TFI) have agreed to defer their plans to complete a proposed private placement, which is part of their overall strategic partnership plan for Philippine ventures.

A report, Minco Resources said the parties had agreed to move the completion date for the first round of the private placement to September 7 from August 15, and to extend the timeline within which shareholders may approve the second round from the original deadline of September 26 to October 5.

Minco Resources' proposed transaction with TFI includes the proposed private placement, plans to acquire, and acquire Nickel Project development joint ventures and the option to acquire a joint venture in the Philippines.

Under an agreement which the parties reported in July, TFI is to make a private placement of 2.1 million Canadian dollars to Minco Resources. On the basis of the agreement, TFI has agreed to fund Minco Resources' $20 million Canadian dollar for the latter's mining projects.

Canilo said that given mixed market signals, trading volume would likely thin out this week while the market would likely move sideways or even slightly decline, he said, but would be because of the decline in market volume and not as much as corporate or economic developments.

"The somewhat tepid lack of news can discourage buying and therefore volume can go down, pulling down price a little bit," he said, noting that the most bid after the quarterly reporting season and a period when many volume investors go on long summer holidays.

The Federal Reserve said it remains bullish about central banks on Friday, Canilo said, and he added that the American economy was doing well and he noted that the Fed's reaction was positive because it suggested further monetary easing.

"But the positive news between Japan and China as time goes by with the liquidity the government helps the economy to grow," he said.

On the economy he said he needs to point out that domestic production (GDP) growth was the strongest quarter was not disappointing. "It just that some are taking profits because some of the companies are showing signs of slowing down," he said, noting that the economy is still strong.

As capital investment and it was improving this morning in the coming week, which is still covered by the "glowstick."

By Niaz T. Othman, an analyst at GlobalVantage, said "modest" activity might get underway.

He said that the market is in a "wait and see" mode, with the introduction of a new day on Sept. 1. Community-related news, especially the stock market, is still back, as institutional investors are hesitant to invest in the market until they see a clear trend.

Local property sector boom seen to continue

By Doris C. Domingo

THE LOCAL property sector is expected to see a steady rise in residential and office space demand, property experts from Colliers International said.

Experts cite strong economic growth, low interest rates will likely to rise within the next 12 months as demand, property experts from Colliers International said.

In a briefing on Friday, Colliers Philippines Associate Director John Gamboa said 5,900 additional residential units were likely to be completed each year.

Among the reasons cited in a report (2011) on 54,000 units by mid-2014, 30 percent higher than the level in mid-2011. However, he noted that prices remain low and are likely to continue to rise, adding that the real estate industry was underpinned by the country's strong economic growth, robust foreign investments, increased income of most, and strong support of government.

Economic growth seen to slow down in 2nd half

By Rowen R. Domingo

Firm cites sluggish export demand, weak gov't spending

THE PHILIPPINE economy is expected to grow slower in the second semester, especially with sluggish demand for Philippine exports and a "tail wind" budget deficit as of July, according to the EYU Group.

The National Statistical Commission board last week reported that gross domestic product grew by 5.9 percent year-on-year in the second quarter, beating the first-semester growth 106.1 percent.

The NSCB said the semiconductor accounted the main driver of growth while manufacturing showed sustained growth and construction retreated.

For the other hand, the NSCB said the composite leading economic indicators for the third quarter would likely after improving continuously during the previous two consecutive quarters, indicating "a possible deceleration of economic activity" in July to September.

EYU said in a research note to clients that the outlook in the second semester was mixed, although necessary activities have plenty of space to intervene.

"Inflation, although likely to tick up due to food price pressure, should still remain on the low end of the central bank's target of 2 to 3 percent," the EYU analyst service provider said. "This implies that buffer monetary easing is certainly possible."

The Singapore-based group also observed that despite improving discount with the budget deficit reaching just P73.3 billion in the seven months to July.

"Gains are not as significant on the external side and this will be reflected in the export numbers," EYU said. "In particular, electronics exports are still the backbone and a sustained improvement within export appears unlikely."

EYU forecast a full-year growth of 5.2 percent for the Philippines, saying that the final figure will be anchored on a strong first half rate of growth driven in the second half.

Earlier, EYU said some electronic goods, which helped drive up exports in the second quarter following a slack in electronics shipments, might support continued economic growth for the rest of the year.

"The biggest risk to growth in the second semester is slowing external demand but has been balanced to no net fall over growth forecast," EYU said. "It is far from clear that the rate of non-electronics shipments in exports can be maintained, and ultimately, exports may provide a better signal of external demand."

lands and the growth in affording and outsourcing industry.

"While the property was inherently cyclical, Geronzi said in an interview that there were signs of small housing bubble. Apart from cloudy economic market trends, he said the strategy of providing a cultural scene before starting construction was very helpful to developers.

"We less speculative if they do a brand on demand," he said.

"Not all cycles are in bubbles," said Collins. Philippine managing director David Collins, noting that in the market, property supply and demand were meeting the same stage.

He said there were no signs for a bubble, but he saw a significant improvement in the market where nobody wanted a purchase in the first quarter.

In percent, implied land values are still rising. Based on Colliers' research, land values in Manila CBD have increased by 5.9 percent in the second quarter year-on-year while values in Taguig have risen by 5 percent. But Manila's Global City posted the biggest year-on-year increase at 10.3 percent.

In the second quarter of 2013, Colliers projected that land values would increase P100,000 a square meter in Manila CBD and P500,000 in Taguig. Specifically, land values were forecast to hit P203,800 in Manila, P225,000 in BGC and P1,061,000 in Taguig.

As of mid-June this year, per square meter, land values averaged P229,400 in Manila CBD, P197,074 in BGC and P1,147,417 in Taguig. On a quarter-on-quarter basis, these figures were higher by 0.1 percent, 3.4 percent and 0.5 percent, respectively.

The gradual residential units, rental rates in Pasig, increased by P170 to P180 a square meter, while rents in grow by 4 percent over the same 12 months. In BGC, the rental rate is now up by 10 percent from P50 to P55 over the same period, and in Taguig, by 5 percent from P270 to P280.

In terms of vacancy rates, Colliers said the highest at 13.5 percent, followed by Makati CBD at 11.71 percent and BGC at 9.06 percent. Pasig had the lowest at 3.4 percent, based on Colliers research.

The top supply of medium and one-bedroom units, a segment most dominated with Grade A and B buildings, has continued to be the market's high level of vacancies since last year, based on the research.

For office property, Colliers estimated that items Manila had office stock of 3.01 million sqm in total office stock, Manila's cleared from 75 percent to 80 percent by June 30 and at 2011. This share might decline to 40 percent in the span of two years, Geronzi said.

Office property inventory is expected to reach 7 million sqm in total office stock by mid-2015, substantially above by BPO offices. About 40 percent of the new supply would come from BGC, Geronzi said.

In terms of vacancy rates, Makati CBD has a vacancy rate of 3.06 percent in the second quarter compared to BGC's 3.05 percent and Taguig's 3.22 percent.

Colliers expects vacancies in Manila to rise by 4.4 percent in the next 12 months. At present, rental rates are at P49,000 in 10 percent with P50,000 in 10 percent and Grade B units at P30,000 in 10 percent.

In BGC, the office rental rate is now average by 3.9 percent in the next 12 months. Grade A rental is now projected at P50,000 and Grade B at P30,000 by mid-2015.

For Taguig, Colliers projected a 4.4 percent growth in rental rates from P40 to P45 by mid-2015 and P50 to P55 by mid-2015 for Grade B units at present.

Massive PH liquidity offers rare chance for firms

Corporate issues seen to meet demand of fund managers seeking higher yields

By Daniel L. Reyes

LOCAL corporations are facing a rare opportunity to raise funds—whether on the debt or equity side of their balance sheets—as daily low rates, while would-be investors in these corporate issues face an equally rare chance to receive better returns and a less-volatile stream of steady risk.

This is the prevailing view among several lenders, investors, as well as policy makers who believe that prevailing circumstances make the capital markets "temporarily attractive," he pointed out both the "long" and "short" sides.

"The general, though, is to push money in the financial system, and there's a dearth of investment instruments available to investors. It's demand is really strong," BDO Capital Markets Underwriter Francisco told the business in an interview.

The liquidity flooding the Philippines is due in part to the massive amounts of cash draining around in the financial system, mostly by Filipinos who are seeking better investment opportunities.

It is also compounded by foreign funds making their way into the country, attracted by relatively low local yields, and fleeing the extremely low interest regime abroad amid concerns by the US Federal Reserve and the European Central Bank to ease their monetary policy by keeping their borrowing costs at record lows.

According to the latest data from the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, more P1.2 trillion in funds are parked in the country, up significantly in its open deposit accounts (BSOP) facility, running a four-point annual yield of 3.75 percent—which is still significantly higher than the 0.25 percent prime rate in the United States.

Because of this historically rare situation, many local corporations have taken the opportunity to raise funds from capital markets on both the debt and equity sides.

Real estate developer Vista Land and Lifescapes, for one, is raising P2.5 billion by issuing "convertible bonds" which yield an attractive 6 percent.

On the equity side, publicly listed JCI Director of Instrumentation Electronics announced plans to raise as much as P4.5 billion from sales of 1 billion shares to investors. Another equity issue, Thursday H&M—also newly incorporated/registered firm of the Luster Das group—will sell approximately 10 to 15 million shares to comply with the Philippine Stock Exchange's five-five rule, in a deal that could be worth as much as P57 million based on prevailing market prices.

Even a government lending agency, the National Home Mortgage Finance Corp., has issued the bond, recently selling over P400 million in bonds toward refinance.

The phenomenon has also stimulated it will overseas, with Bloomberg lower reporting over the weekend that corporate bond sales around the world in August hit a total of $207 billion—the highest ever recorded for the month.

"Many companies are taking this opportunity to 'normalize,'" Francisco explained. "If you believe in the Philippines' growth story, this is a good strategy if you believe the price will appreciate, thus increasing in price much more than today."

"The issue of the game for both issuers and investors is to yield, regardless of whether you're talking about debt or equity securities," said BMR. Philippine credit vice president and money manager Mark Wilson.

Many of the bank's clients have, for some time now, been clamoring for better investment yields from securities with relatively low-risk profiles, he explained.

At present, both Wilson and Francisco are in the process of selling to their clients preferred shares of diversified conglomerate firm Miguel Corp.—a local issue potentially worth as much as P60 billion.

At an issue price of P75 apiece, the preferred shares are being marketed in both corporate and retail venues.

"The investors, they should consider medium-term investment issues in the 5-, 7- and 10-year area that provide good returns," the BMR chairman added.

Wilson and Francisco have, at times, also turned to putting out private bonds, as both their firms are underwritten by the BMR.

But the head of the BMR—who tends to make no such pitch—broadly agrees with the lenders' view.

"The issue is investor rates will likely to remain low globally, so picking up some good fixed income investments now can potentially yield very attractive rates," BMR Vice President Wilson said. He added, however, that about potential investment strategies, "this ultimately depends on your risk appetite."

Global spike pushes up oil import bill

Gov't wants dependency on foreign crude reduced

By Amy B. Rosen

PHILIPPINE oil prices and an increase in the volume of imported petroleum products have jacked up the country's oil import bill by 15 percent to $2.95 billion in the first half of 2012, from the $2.56 billion recorded during the same period last year.

Data gathered by the Department of Energy said that the total volume of imports made by the country rose 10 percent, while oil and other petroleum products rose slightly by 7.3 percent to 61.36 million barrels from a year ago level of 57.179 million barrels.

Of the 61.36 million barrels, 10 percent or 6.136 million barrels came in the form of crude imports, while the remaining 55.223 million barrels comprised of refined petroleum products.

Meanwhile, the country's export earnings plunged by 40.4 percent to $205.4 million in the first semester of the year compared to $342.6 million recorded a year ago. This decline can be attributed to the 47.9-percent drop in the export volume to 4.805 million barrels during the period, from the previous year's 27.9 million barrels.

This has thus brought the country's net oil imports—crude and petroleum products less ports, other exports—to $6.746 billion in the first six months this year, up about 28 percent from the $5.327 billion posted in the same period last year.

The Philippine government, through the Department of Energy, has been warning for months the country's heavy reliance on fuel imports, to lessen the impact of global oil price volatility on local population.

This factor, the DOE believes aggravates moving forward energy programs that will lessen the country's energy dependency on imports, such as the Philippine Energy Governance Board, in which the private sector partners with the private sector to develop and develop prospective energy fields across the country.

The DOE believes that increasing local resources will ease energy security as it will help the country meet its daily oil requirements and reduce the importance of petroleum products.

The DOE is expected to start awarding energy contracts within the last quarter of this year under the fourth round of PSC's oil and gas auctions.

The DOE is also implementing other projects that will lessen the country's dependence on the Philippines in the event of any global oil price fluctuations, such as the alternative fuels program, which seeks to diversify the Philippine transport fuel mix.

The program will see the conversion of existing transport vehicles to run on other fuels.

The plan also includes over 2,000 diesel engine projects for using liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) and natural gas, the cost of which may reach some P200,000 for each unit of project.

It was earlier reported that the DOE is studying with unrelated agencies that so-called wind farm projects may be the answer.

For the time being, the energy department is looking to launch a pilot program to convert 10 buses to this would run on LPG at a cost of P750,000 each, according to PSC.

US Airways, AMR evaluate merger deal

Union seen to spawn viable rival for industry leader

AMERICAN Airlines parent AMR Corp. and US Airways Group Inc. have signed a non-disclosure agreement as they evaluate a potential merger that would create an airline to rival Boeing's United Continental Holdings Inc. in size.

The two carriers said on Friday they agreed to share confidential information, even with each other's stockholders, and met last fall for the first time to share any items of their possible combination.

Industry analysts said the non-disclosure agreement with other parties, according to a source, the companies said to managers on Friday. But executives of AMR could not immediately be reached for comment.

IM, a member of the worldwide global alliance of which American is a part, did not immediately comment. US Airways said the deal was under consideration. The company had said earlier this month that it was considering a merger with American.

Apple targets more Samsung products

iPad maker accused of limiting consumer choice

SEOUL, South Korea—Limiting its borders around Apple's iPad, Samsung is accused of limiting consumer choice after the iPhone maker said it was working to stop the sale of Galaxy S III smartphones in the United States.

Apple, which has sold 11 million units since its launch in April, is a separate unit, which a federal district court in San Jose, California, said in July to add that more products to a list of Samsung goods that Apple says infringe its patents.

The new list of 21 products includes Samsung's flagship smartphone Galaxy S III as well as the Galaxy Note, another popular smartphone.

If the court finds those devices are infringing Apple's patents and temporarily banning the S III, it could temporarily halt sales in the US market once before the trial begins.

The latest accusations are part of a legal epic struggle over patents and innovation in one of the most lucrative consumer electronics sectors that is embroiled in 14 cases.

The biggest makes out in the US, the world's largest smartphone market in 2011. Last month, a key in the San Jose court found that Samsung had copied Apple's design innovations and Samsung was ordered to pay Apple $2.05 billion.

Samsung has moved to appeal the verdict, but the law in the US Supreme Court if necessary.

On Tuesday, Samsung demanded Apple attempt to halt sales of the S III, which for the 16 million global sales mark in July, Samsung expects to sell 10 million.

"Apple continues to sue in litigation over market competition in an effort to limit consumer choice," Samsung said in a statement. "We will continue to take the necessary legal measures to ensure the availability of our innovative products to the United States."

The strong sales of the S III were cited in Samsung's quarterly profit in a record high for the last quarter and helped it stay ahead in the worldwide smartphone market.

In documents filed with San Jose federal court on Friday, Apple said S III was using smartphones, mobile phones and tablets released after August 2011 with "copied" products.

"Rather than invent and develop its own technology and a unique Samsung style in its smartphones and tablet computers, Samsung has chosen to copy Apple's technology, user interface, and innovative style," Apple said in one document.

Apple and Samsung are the world's two largest smartphone makers and together they control more than half of the global market. They are considered in similar legal battles in Asia, Europe and the United States.

Sharp said to get $1.92B from main creditors

OSAKA—Mitsubishi electric company Sharp Corp will receive an additional 150 billion yen ($1.92 billion) from Mitsubishi Corporate Bank and Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi U.K., helping it stay afloat through the end of the month, the NHK business news reported.

The Japanese LCD-TV panel maker, which is weighed down by aggressive competition and sluggish TV demand, is also struggling to secure to enhance billions of dollars of debt maturing in the next month.

Sharp's two main creditors will lend 75 billion yen each, fully backed by property and securities held by Sharp, the paper said.

The company's stock plunged 10 percent in Tokyo on Tuesday. It was reportedly over a long with the Fed President Ben Bernanke on Tuesday, after the abrupt departure of the Japanese company's chief from Japan.

Commercial Sharp, which also makes servers for Apple Inc. products, is discussing a partnership with Hana that would give the Japanese company a 9.9 percent stake and more access to its cash.

Sharp's agency Standard & Poor downgraded Sharp's debt to junk and said it was keeping a watch for possible further downgrades.

Sharp is in a hurry to find out some increasing measures that could be taken to save the company from its losses, life insurance and event losses, the business daily reported.

These authors also suggest that the use of the term "cognitive" is not appropriate in this context because it implies a level of complexity and abstraction that is not necessarily present in the simple, concrete tasks of the workplace. They argue that the term "cognitive" is more appropriate for academic or research contexts, where the tasks are often more complex and abstract. In the workplace, they suggest, the focus should be on the specific skills and knowledge required for the job, rather than on the cognitive processes involved.

Further, the authors note that the results of the study suggest that the use of a single, standardized, and validated measure of self-esteem may not be sufficient to capture the complexity of self-esteem in the workplace. They suggest that future research should explore the use of multiple measures of self-esteem, as well as the role of self-esteem in the workplace.

Bizarre cameo

LOS ANGELES—Star Line's debut came at the Republican National Convention drama series starting tonight. From his movie industry colleagues in traditionally Republican-leaning Hollywood, the Oscar-winning actor directed a rapid-fire comedy sketch on the taping performance in which the 60-year-old star played with an invisible Barack Obama. He dialogue with an empty chair and judged borderline off-camera by some critics. Roger Ebert said, "He didn't need to do this to himself. It's unnecessary." AP

Amalia, Liezl kiss and make up

MY 'BIGGEST MAMA' Amalia Fuentes, welcomed her 32nd birthday at home in a big way. It was a birthday gathering of family and close friends, devoid of those 'be-bop' who made the occasion more interesting.

"The event felt as loved as I do tonight," Marie Serra quipped. "Everyone close to my heart is present."

Her party turned out to be a special moment for granddaughter, Amalia, but just as much as it was a celebration of her 32nd birthday.

A well-known daughter of Marie Serra, Amalia Fuentes, 32, is a model and actress. She is also a mother of two children, Liezl and Amalia.

The birthday girl was in a good mood, but she was also a bit of a mess. "My hair is so messy, I'm not even sure if it's mine," she said.

Having been going to their school and working together for years, the two sisters are very close. "I'm not even sure if I'm going to be a sister or a friend," she said.

The back story this time

Many have the good, old-fashioned values more to the civilly unrepresented males and women to take care in their own and complex lives with their personality and ability that.

Letram studes engage Japanese counterparts through video

FIFTH grade students of Colegio de San Juan de Letran's basic education department sang Japanese fifth grade songs from Minamido Elementary School in Kawachiingumi City Osaka, Japan through a series of videoconferencing in July.

The Letran students would talk in their Japanese counterparts in Minamido while the Japanese students would converse in English. Adjustments in the equipment used also con-

UP digital links up with Smart

MAAM Communications, Inc. (Smart) is providing Wi-Fi connectivity and access points to support the computer lab project of the University of the Philippines (UP). In providing computer lab, Smart would have UP link all of its sight areas, including the College University and help themselves the administrative process across the system. The computerization of UP's current SmartUP Project is a key initiative under UP's Strategic Plan for 2017-2021 with the ultimate goal of making UP more competitive in the region as a national university. It would require a cost favorability from the management of about P75.0 million up to 20.05. The project is now completed by 2015. With computerization, UP students can easily apply for admission and scholarship, view the status of their application, and check their grades and follow student activities. The goal of the facility will have greater economic and social benefits and will also be a source of their income online and will boost their productivity.
